Please note that the study of Orthodox Christianity is an inter- or cross-disciplinary field of study. The following list is restricted mainly to sociological scholarship or work written from a sociological perspective. Historical works are excluded. The sources cited here are mainly works of general relevance or comparative in nature (e.g. they refer to at least two different countries or regions). Work that explicitly focuses on individual countries is deliberately excluded from this list of general sources. Such work should be listed under a separate listing for individual countries.
